Last year, I was on holiday with my family on a Caribbean island. The weather was perfect! It was always sunny and warm and we were at the beach from early in the morning till late in the afternoon. We were all very happy. But one day it was particularly too hot and humid. It was really strange because we were all very tired. I remember I was with my parents having breakfast at the hotel early in the morning. The receptionist was very nervous. Apparently, there was a hurricane near the island. The next thing I remember is that there were strong winds and many objects (boxes, plastic chairs, etc.) flying outside. Apart from that, there was no electricity. I was really terrified! Fortunately, the emergency lights were on and the receptionist gave us some safety tips. After some minutes, everything was OK again. Outside the hotel there were some men in uniform trying to calm down some tourists. Then, we were relieved to know that there weren't any victims. But many parts of the island were destroyed. It wasn't that bad after all!
