The world's fastest land mammal (1) _____. Today there are just 7,100 cheetahs left in the wild, according to a new study.

Why are they disappearing? Because of several reasons, like the establishment of animal and agriculture farms. People sometimes kill cheetahs if they see the animals as (2) _____, but cheetahs rarely take domesticated animals. Cheetahs are also captured for their skin and other body parts. Also, cheetah's prey species, such as antelopes and gazelles are hunted by people in many areas, leaving them without food. Other threats include (3) _____ as pets mainly in the Middle East, which results in the illegal trade of cubs from North Africa.

Restoration of habitat, ensuring balance in the predator-prey ratio, (4) _____ are all efforts that are needed to address these threats. Surprisingly, (5) _____ to protected areas like national parks and wildlife reserves. Fortunately, organisations such as the Cheetah Conservation Fund (CCF), are working with farmers on the ground in some places to help ensure the cheetah's survival.
