Matt has got an unusual hobby. He likes to balance rocks. When people see his displays, the first thing they usually think is 'that's impossible'. Then, they think 'that must be fake'. But no, there is no glue. Matt chooses rocks from around his home in California. Then, with a lot of patience and time, he slowly builds towers and other designs. 'You can really use any rocks', he says. 'You just need time to find the exact point where one rock is balanced on top of another. Of course, it gets more difficult with every rock you add, because if something is just a little bit wrong on the bottom, it will cause problems later'. He is going to try for the World Championship in Texas next year. Until then, check out some of his work and tell us what you think!
