Steven Spielberg is one of the most influential directors of the last fifty years. Along with George Lucas, he's one of the most famous blockbuster creators. For his first studio film, he directed a film about a shark killing and frightening people in a small town. Because they did not have money for amazing special effects, he decided not to fully show the shark until the end of the film. This made the shark even more terrifying to audiences, and Jaws became an international blockbuster. Spielberg continued his success from there. His films have made more money than those of any other director in history. Other Spielberg trademarks are characters staring toward the audience at something we can't see, families with one parent and changes in history.
